

Southwest Wildlife Foundation of Utah

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CONTACT:

Martin Tyner, CEO and Founder
Southwest Wildlife Foundation of Utah
(435)590-1618
martin@gowildlife.org

The Bald Eagle That Would Not Quit

A short film about the rescue, two month recovery, and release of a bald eagle

View at: www.gowildlife.org/eagle

Cedar City, UT, April 10, 2017 - The Southwest Wildlife Foundation of Utah has released a short film titled, "The Bald Eagle That Would Not Quit". In January of 2015, a very, very, sick bald eagle arrived at the rescue center. Initially, wildlife rehabilitator, Martin Tyner, did not think the bird would survive. Over nearly two months, the bald eagle continued to fight and, against all odds, grew stronger and healthier.

This film features footage of examinations and feedings as the bald eagle recovers. During sessions with the bald eagle, Martin shares extensive information about wildlife rehabilitation and notes positive signs of recovery.

Educational materials and full transcript are available at www.gowildlife.org/eagle.

About the Martin Tyner

At age twelve, Martin Tyner started caring for the sick, injured and orphaned creatures in his home town of Simi Valley, CA. At age nineteen, Tyner was hired as curator of birds of prey at Busch Gardens, CA. Martin Tyner is a federally licensed falconer, eagle falconer, wildlife rehabilitator, wildlife propagator, and wildlife and environmental educator. He has been providing wildlife and environmental programs throughout the western United States to schools, scouts and community groups for over forty years.

About the Southwest Wildlife Foundation of Utah

Founded in 1997 in Cedar City Utah, a 501c3 non-profit organization dedicated to wildlife rescue and rehabilitation, wildlife and environmental education, and the development of the Cedar Canyon Nature Park.